

Bound Tree Medical is proud to support the documentary film “Honorable But Broken: EMS in Crisis”

The documentary highlights the challenges facing EMS today, including funding, retention of EMTs and paramedics and the need to make EMS an essential service. It is being produced by Bryony Gilbey, a former “CBS News,” “60 Minutes,” “ABC News” and “Discovery Channel” producer, and mother of three EMS professionals; and Richard Diefenbach, a former deputy bureau chief for “CBS News” in New York and Los Angeles. They were inspired to produce this film after learning about the plight of EMS workers further stretched to the brink with the pandemic.

American actress and producer Sarah Jessica Parker, named one of “Time” magazine’s 100 most influential people of 2022 and six-time Golden Globe Award winner, is the narrator of the film.

Bound Tree is supporting the film in multiple ways, including creating the official poster. Through Bound Tree’s daily work on EMS advocacy efforts in Washington D.C., the film helps convey the message that EMS really is in crisis and more funding is needed from lawmakers.

To see a clip of the film or to support the cause.

www.honorablebutbroken.org

